Yes, a Robinhood account can be permanently closed, but only after all requirements are met. Account deletion is not immediate and typically involves a review process to ensure there are no open trades, unsettled funds, or regulatory holds.

Once closed, your account will no longer allow trading, deposits, or withdrawals, and you will lose access to in-app features. However, some records may still be retained for legal and tax purposes.

Step-by-Step: How to Delete a Robinhood Account

Step 1: Sell or Transfer All Investments

Before closing your Robinhood account, you must close all open positions or transfer them to another brokerage. Robinhood will not process account deletion while stocks, ETFs, options, or crypto remain in your portfolio.

Step 2: Withdraw Remaining Funds

Once your positions are closed and trades are settled, withdraw all remaining cash to your linked bank account. Keep in mind that settlement periods may delay withdrawals by several business days.

Step 3: Resolve Outstanding Balances

📞(1⇒[307➤9(2)0➤9672]) Any pending fees, margin balances, or account deficits must be cleared before closure 📞(1⇒[307➤9(2)0➤9672]). If your account shows a 📞(1⇒[307➤9(2)0➤9672]) restriction or negative balance, it must be resolved first 📞(1⇒[307➤9(2)0➤9672]).
